MyCAF Profile: Reflection

Your reflective statement:

I ranked curiosity, perseverance, and self-efficacy as my top strengths because they help me learn independently and stay focused under pressure. I'm confident in these traits since I enjoy exploring new ideas and turning challenges into opportunities for growth.

However, I feel less confident about communication and connection. During my internship, I realized that expressing ideas clearly and understanding others' perspectives are crucial when collaborating on art projects.

I ranked these two qualities higher in relevance because I believe communication and connection are the foundation of human society and the creative field. Art itself is a dialogue — between creators, audiences, and the world. Being able to connect meaningfully with others will make my artistic and curatorial practice more empathetic and impactful.

Where do I want to be?

Creative Attribute 1

I plan to focus on improving my storytelling through promoting my handmade art dolls online. By observing how other independent artists share their creative process and personal stories, I hope to learn how to make my posts more engaging and emotionally resonant. My goal is to develop a stronger personal voice that connects the meaning behind each work with my audience.

Creative Attribute 2

I want to improve my connection between art and society. I plan to participate in more exhibitions, workshops, and online spaces where people can interact with my projects. I hope my future works can reach more people and explore social or cultural topics, so that my art becomes more meaningful and visible in a wider context.

Creative Attribute 3

I plan to improve my enterprise by being more active in professional art communities. I will check open calls, chat groups, and online platforms regularly to find opportunities for exhibitions, collaborations, and jobs. By doing this, I hope to expand my network and integrate myself more deeply into the art community.
